Definition: this is a stitched cloth badge featuring a mine symbol topped by a red flame on a green background, sized 8 cm x 10 cm. The patch is a decorative emblem that can be sewn or heat-applied to garments and gear.

- Durable embroidery: Carefully stitched details intended for long-lasting appearance.
- Versatile attachment: Can be sewn on or applied with heat adhesive depending on preference.
- Collector appeal: Sized 8 cm x 10 cm, suitable for military surplus collections and tactical displays.

How to use / When it’s useful

Use the patch to personalize uniforms, bags, or display boards. It is useful for collectors, reenactors, or anyone wanting a historical-style emblem for casual or display use.

Quick answer: attach by sewing for maximum durability or use a heat adhesive for faster application. In most cases, sewing is recommended for items that will be washed or heavily used, while heat-adhesive works well for display items or low-wear gear.

Care and notes

Basic care preserves the embroidery and color. Follow these simple guidelines to keep the patch in good condition.

- Avoid hot ironing directly over the embroidered surface; if using heat adhesive, follow the adhesive manufacturer’s instructions.
- Hand wash or gentle machine cycle recommended when attached to washable garments.
- Store flat and dry to prevent distortion of the embroidered threads.
- Note: currently sold in the original, non-customizable design.
