It is designed for formal wear and for collectors of military surplus, tactical memorabilia, ceremonial duty pieces, and police insignia.

Definition: a small enamel badge reproducing the Commendatore cross, made for secure wear on civilian jackets and lapels.

Clean design and reliable construction make this pin suitable for display on suits, jackets, and ceremonial attire.

- Accurate design: Enamel on a green background with vertical red stripes and the Commendatore cross at the center, the cross arms enamelled white.
- Durable finish: Made with quality materials for long-lasting appearance and resistance to everyday wear.
- Secure fastening: Rear piston-style attachment for a stable, easy-to-use fit.
- Two sizes: Available in 1.1 cm and 1.6 cm to match preference and placement needs.
- Suitable for civilian wear: Designed to be worn on civilian clothing for formal events or daily display.

How to use / When it's useful

Quick answer: pin it to the left lapel or jacket chest area using the piston back; it is intended for civilian and formal attire rather than as an official service medal. In most cases, choose the smaller size for subtle wear and the larger size for more visible display.

Use the pin for ceremonies, receptions, formal gatherings, or as part of a collector's display of military surplus and tactical memorabilia. It is practical for recipients who want a neat, secure accessory that signals recognition without replacing original medals.

Care and notes

Simple care keeps the enamel bright and the attachment secure.

- Wipe gently with a soft, dry cloth; avoid abrasive cleaners and strong chemicals.
- Remove before machine washing garments or exposing to heavy moisture.
- Check the piston back periodically to ensure the pin remains secure.
- Contains small parts—keep away from children to avoid choking hazards.

A: The pin is offered in two sizes: 1.1 cm and 1.6 cm. Select your preferred size from the product menu.
