Product overview

Nastrino Ricerca Scientifica in Antartide is a service ribbon that recognizes Defence personnel and staff from other administrations who served in national Arctic and Antarctic missions. It is aimed at collectors, active and former duty members, and institutions that display official honours.

Definition: the Nastrino Ricerca Scientifica in Antartide is a 37 mm regulation ribbon, instituted by interministerial decree in 1994, symbolizing commitment to scientific research in polar regions.

Main features

This ribbon is offered in standard and a slightly domed "Elite" variant, with customizable attachment and packaging options suitable for uniforms, displays, and collections.

- Distinctive design: clearly recognisable ribbon that denotes Arctic and Antarctic scientific service.
- Regulation size: available only in the 37 mm format, compliant with the original specification.
- Finish options: flat standard finish or slightly domed Elite variant for a different look.
- Attachment choices: supplied with a ribbon bar holder using rear clamps or screws (selectable).
- Durable materials: made to last and to withstand normal wear on uniforms and display mounts.
- Packaging choices: single holders or multi-ribbon metal bases to mount two or more ribbons together.

How to use / When it’s useful

Wear the ribbon on service dress or use the metal base to display it with other honours in a presentation case. It suits military, tactical, police and duty collections where official ribbons are catalogued or exhibited.

Quick answer: the ribbon denotes service in national Arctic and Antarctic missions and is most often worn by authorised personnel or kept as a collectible. In most cases, choose the clamp attachment for easy removal and the screw attachment for a more secure, long-term fit.

Care and notes

Keep the ribbon clean and attached securely; follow uniform rules when wearing it on service clothing.

- Store away from direct sunlight and excessive moisture to protect colours.
- Clean gently with a soft cloth; avoid solvents or abrasive cleaners.
- Ensure screws or clamps are tightened to prevent loss; check fittings periodically.
- Verify eligibility and local uniform regulations before wearing on duty uniforms.
